

Privacy Policy – Dependency Map

Summary

We care about your personal details and your privacy. It is of the utmost importance for us that you feel secure with our treatment of your personal data.

In this policy, we want to clarify to what extent we handle your personal details in addition to describing your rights in this matter.

We handle and store your personal information according to this Privacy Policy. FindOut strives to reduce the handling of personal information, continuously removing inaccurate and outdated data within our systems in accordance to the time frames as defined by law and regulation.

Data controller

FindOut Technologies AB, org.nr 556653-5273 (hereinafter referred to as FindOut) Arne Beurlings Torg 9A, 164 40 Kista, Sweden is the controller handling your personal information and is responsible for following the General Data Protection Regulation, GDPR.

Data collection

By downloading and using Dependency Map, you do not share any data with FindOut. Dependency Map does not send any information whatsoever to FindOut about your Jira filters, projects, or issues, nor does it send any kind of usage data or user behavior data to FindOut.

Upon contacting us for support, we do save your email address for further correspondence. The information you share with us, such as information given in emails, may be saved for further correspondence.

We use web cookies to remember the last map you used in Dependency Map. These cookies are written to your computer's local storage. The cookies do not contain any Jira-related data.

You have the right, at any time, to ask us for the information we store about you. And, due to the "right-to-be-forgotten" ruling, you have the right to have your personal information removed from our systems upon request.

We will never give away any personal or identifiable information (including your e-mail address) to third parties, except in cases where we are required to do so by law.
